Gordon Lachance, also known as Gordie, recounts his childhood experience of seeing a dead body at the age of 12. This traumatic event still haunts him in his dreams. Gordie reflects on the importance of speaking the truth, even when it's difficult. In Castle Rock, Maine, Gordie Lechance navigates adolescence with friends Chris Chambers, Teddy Duchamp, and Vern Tessio. Chris struggles with a deeply troubled home life, where his father frequently beats him mercilessly. The group of friends includes Teddy, who idolizes his father, Norman, a World War II veteran, despite being less intelligent. * Gordie Lechance: A 12-year-old boy growing up in Castle Rock, Maine. * Chris Chambers: Gordie's best friend and part of the same group as Teddy and Vern. Chris comes from a dysfunctional family with an abusive father. * Teddy Duchamp: Friend to Gordie, Chris, and Vern. Teddy reveres his father, Norman, despite being less intelligent. * Vern Tessio: Friend to Gordie, Chris, and Teddy. Vern's older brother is Billy, who hangs out with a gang of older boys. * Billy Tessio: Vern's older brother, part of the same gang as Charlie Hogan, Ace Merrill, Eyeball Chambers, and Fuzzy Bracowicz. Billy is afraid of Ray Brower's death. * Charlie Hogan: Member of the older boys' gang that includes Billy Tessio, Ace Merrill, Eyeball Chambers, and Fuzzy Bracowicz. * Richard Chambers (Eyeball): Chris's older brother, part of Ace Merrill's gang. * Ace Merrill: Ringleader of the older boys' gang, including Billy Tessio, Charlie Hogan, Eyeball Chambers, and Fuzzy Bracowicz. Ace is a violent hoodlum who beats up Gordie. * Dennis Lechance: Gordie's older brother, born after Mom experienced multiple miscarriages. Gordie's father is in his early 60s at the time of the events in the book and consistently shows a preference for Dennis over Gordie. Gordie's mother struggled with fertility issues prior to Dennis's birth. Teddy Duchamp's father, Norman Duchamp, was a World War II veteran who stormed the beaches at Normandy and fought in France. The Castle Rock city dump was run by Milo Pressman, a middle-aged man who didn't take kindly to kids trespassing on his property. Gordie's short story "The Revenge of Lard Ass Hogan" featured Davie "Lard Ass" Hogan, a boy teased for his size who entered the annual pie-eating contest to exact revenge on Bill Travis, the defending champion and mechanic at the local gas station. In "Stud City," Gordie wrote about Chico, a disaffected teenager who slept with his girlfriend Jane in their family home. His older brother Johnny had a tumultuous relationship with their stepmother Virginia, who seduced him and got him a night shift job at the pit. Stephen King's writing career began after his father left when he was just two years old. His mother raised him and his brother on her own, moving many times before settling in Maine. King attended college on scholarship and started selling short stories while still a student. King is known for his horror stories but has also explored suspense, science fiction, and historical fiction. He published "Carrie" in 1974, allowing him to quit teaching and focus solely on writing. The Body, set during the post-World War II era, follows Gordie Lechance and his friends as Baby Boomers struggling with cultural alienation amidst shifting values. The Vietnam War looms large, with Gordie's older brother Dennis dying in service. Many young men, including Gordie himself, were drafted against their will. The Vietnam War between North Vietnam (backed by the U.S.S.R. and China) and South Vietnam (supported by the United States and its allies) was a prolonged and bloody conflict that resulted in over 58,000 American troop fatalities. Meanwhile, Gordie and his friends embarked on a perilous journey to find a deceased body, mirroring classic tales of heroism like Homer's Odyssey. The Body also explores themes of coming-of-age as the group confronts mortality and grapples with life's harsh realities, echoing works such as J.D. Salinger's The Catcher in the Rye and Mark Twain's Huckleberry Finn. The Body is a novella by Stephen King set in Castle Rock, Maine, a fictional town based on his childhood hometown of Durham. Other notable books sharing its setting include The Dead Zone, Cujo, and Needful Things. In this world, Gordie and his friends face off against Ace Merrill and his gang over the discovery of Ray Brower's body. Stephen King often draws inspiration from real-life locations, incorporating them into his stories as a tribute to their significance. For instance, he named Castle Rock in homage to William Golding's Lord of the Flies, where the discovery of "Castle Rock" serves as a turning point for the stranded boys. Notably, the 1986 film adaptation of The Body, titled Stand By Me, holds a special place in King's heart and is widely regarded as one of the best movies ever made.
